U.S. Cancels Tests, May Revive Talks

By HARRY KELLY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. has abruptly canceled three explosions at its Nevada nuclear testing site. The action followed word that President Kennedy is studying a new note on Soviet Premier Khrushchev on test ban negotiations.

A White House spokesman denied there was any relationship between the two developments.

Without explanation, the Atomic Energy Commission announced Monday that it and the Defense Department were calling off "three small sub-kiloton detonations" which had been scheduled for this month.

Two were to involve nuclear devices, the third a chemical high explosive.

Radio Moscow had combined that the U.S. tests were aimed at producing new types of nuclear weapons and added in a veiled threat:

"One thing is clear, the USSR is not going to stand by idly watching the U.S. perfect its nuclear weapons."

U.S. sources said the Khrushchev letter made no change in the Soviet position on a nuclear test ban—"it moves neither forward or backward."

The letter, also addressed to British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, made no mention of a threat Khrushchev had made to withdraw his offer to permit two or three inspections on Soviet soil to police a ban agreement.

The letter was in response to a message last month from Kennedy and Macmillan judging Khrushchev to help get the Geneva test ban talks off dead center.

Pierre Salinger, White House press secretary, said Kennedy received the Moscow note shortly after his news conference Wednesday.

It was at this conference that the President said he was "not hopeful" that a test ban agreement could be reached with Russia.

Shortly after the President left the press conference, the AEC disclosed the plans for the three tests which were canceled Monday.

No Positive Identification

The badly burned body of a man found Sunday in a burned pickup truck in Clark County still hasn't been positively identified according to Arkansas State Police here.

However, the truck was owned by Carl Richardson, about 48, of Prescott, and he is missing. His family was visiting in Texas.

The body was sent to the Little Rock Medical Center for analysis.

Birmingham Still in Grip of Uncertainty

By JACK STILLMAN

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Uncertainty and apprehension continued to grip this racially troubled city today as 3,000 combat-ready troops stood within striking distance in the event of new outbreaks of major violence.

Scattered violence was reported during the night. Two persons were hurt. Automobile windshields were smashed and windows were broken in about a dozen buildings.

A white youth was slashed on his right elbow with a knife. He said he was attacked by a group of Negroes. A Negro man was hospitalized after he was struck in the face by a large steel ball fixed from slingshot apparently wielded by white youth.

President Kennedy ordered the troops into the state, but Gov. George C. Wallace says the action is illegal and hints that he may seek a federal injunction to keep federal forces out of the city.

Kennedy wired Wallace that he acted under a section of the U.S. Code giving the President the power to determine whether federal troops are needed in cases of domestic violence, and whether state authorities are providing adequate protection to citizens.

Wallace and Kennedy may meet Saturday at Muscle Shoals, Ala. The President is scheduled to attend an observance by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

In other developments concerning the tense racial situation here: —Jackie Robinson and Floyd Patterson spoke to Negroes at a mass meeting Monday night and said Negroes here are fighting to end segregation everywhere.

—A Negro reserve police captain said that state troopers prevented him from using 62 uniformed Negro reserves to help quell the rioting which followed Saturday night's bombings.

—Police said no arrests have been made in their investigation of the bombings. The FBI is working on the case, too, but has made no report.

—Integration leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. went through the city's Negro community and in pool halls and on street corners urging his listeners to discard their knives and clubs. "If the streets of Birmingham are going to flow with the blood, let it be our blood and not the blood of our white brothers," he pleaded.

—Two Army generals and top Justice Department officials set up a headquarters in Birmingham.

The police patrol at one time was estimated at 1,200 men. It was reported that only a few hundred were on duty.

"You can say that Police Chief Jamie Moore and Alabama State Director Al Lingo share joint responsibility for the command," said Birmingham Police Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor.

Maj. Walter Allen of the highway patrol, said: "There is no continued on Page Four

Plane Seizures Could Bring Retaliation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House said today President Kennedy will ask Congress for authority to retaliate if the British government seizes U.S. planes in a dispute over fares on North Atlantic air routes.

Pierre Salinger, White House press secretary, said the bill would be sent to Congress later today.

He declined comment when asked if Democratic congressional leaders were asked to seek quick passage of the legislation when they met with the President for breakfast this morning. Salinger would only say that they were informed of the bill.

The British and several other foreign countries are trying to force Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines to charge increased fares over the North Atlantic routes, despite objections by the United States.

The higher rates had been agreed on by the International Air Transport Association last fall.

Julian Amery, British minister of aviation, Monday accused the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board of inciting the two airlines to "break our law." He told the House of Commons:

"The situation is unacceptable and cannot be allowed to continue."

He has threatened to confiscate American airlines landing in London.

Salinger told his news conference that under present law the CAB lacks power to enforce its air fares on foreign planes within the continental United States. He said the proposed bill would give them necessary authority.

Grand Lodge to Observe 100th Year

There will be a session of the Grand Lodge of Arkansas held in the Confederate State Capitol Building in Washington, on July 4, 1963, in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the first meeting of the Grand Lodge in Washington in the year 1863.

Constitution of the Grand Lodge of Arkansas, requires that there be an annual meeting at the seat of government. It was in conformity to this requirement that the lodge met in Washington on hundred years ago, and in commemoration of that event all officers will in person convene a session in the room now used by the Washington Masonic Lodge, on July 4, 1963, and at the same time unveil a monument commemorating the 1863 session at the northeast corner of the Confederate State Capitol Building.

The public, and particularly all Masons are urged to be in attendance.

Gradual Loss of Rail Firemen Is Planned

WASHINGTON (AP)—A three-man presidential panel laid down broad guidelines today for gradual removal of most firemen from freight and yard trains central issue in a work rules dispute that threatens a nationwide rail strike June 12.

In a report to President Kennedy, the panel said the issues between the railroads and the five operating brotherhoods have been narrowed, and an agreement can be reached in the next 30 days if both sides will bargain realistically.

"The next 30 days will be important not only to the parties, but also to the nation, and to the future of collective bargaining as an effective method of disputes settlement. Although the general public is not a formal party to this dispute, each citizen in the United States has an acute interest in its resolution," the report said.

The central issue is the recommendation of an earlier presidential commission—named by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower—which proposed eliminating 40,000 firemen from freight and yard trains.

The railroads contend outmoded work rules cost them $600 million each year. They call these rules "featherbedding."

The railroads accepted the proposal of the earlier presidential

Underground Test Gigantic

NEVADA TEST SITE, Nev. (AP)—Ten months ago scientists fired a 100-kiloton thermonuclear device buried 625 feet in the earth. In three seconds 12 million tons of soil rose in a mighty upheaval. The Atomic Energy Commission gave newsmen their first look at the results of the blast Tuesday.

On the AEC's test area here they were shown a gigantic hole—1,200 feet across, deep enough to hide a 32-story building. The walls are so steep the only way to get down into it is in a four-wheeled buggy, attached to a cable, which is lowered down a runway of metal mats by a crane.

AEC spokesman said the blast was part of a test to develop peaceful uses for the powers of atomic explosion. The July 6 device had a power equivalent to 100,000 tons of TNT. Nuclear power, when safely harnessed, will be able to save up to 90 per cent of the cost of conventional excavations, a scientist told newsmen.

One big problem: radiation. Workers weren't able to get into the crater until February.

Standings Seem a Little Dizzy at This Stage

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

So, the Boston Red Sox are in second place in the American League. So, what's so funny about that?

Aren't the Chicago White Sox, like Boston a prime pre-season choice for the second division, running in front? And the Kansas City Athletics, another pick for the lower echelon, a close third?

And aren't New York's mighty Yankees struggling along in fourth with the other contenders stringing behind?

It's just a crazy, mixed-up race, that's all.

The Red Sox put the slug on the Washington Senators 8-5 Monday night and the Los Angeles Angels whipped the White Sox 7-3 in the only games on the AL schedule.

The results eased Boston into the runner-up spot, one game back of Chicago and 10 percentage points ahead of the A's, and put the Angels into a sixth-place tie with Cleveland at the .500 level.

In the only National League game, the Houston Colts climbed out of sole occupancy of the cellar with their fifth straight victory, outlasting the New York Mets 4-2 in a runaway turned cliffhanger.

Houston now shares ninth place with Milwaukee.

The Red Sox belted seven extra-basers among their 11 hits, including a three-run homer by Bob Tilton in the sixth inning that stood up as the clincher.

Washington starter Don Rudolph was routed in the first.

Tall Gene Conley was credited with the pitching victory, his second in three decisions, with strong help from Dick Radatz.

The Angels also went on a long ball binge in beating Chicago for the second time in a row, while the White Sox had a frustrating evening on the bases.

Leon Wagner smacked his seventh homer and two singles for Los Angeles. Ed Sadowski homered and singled, George Thomas hit a homer, and Jim Fregosi cracked a triple and two-run double.

The White Sox hit several chances but the big one was in the second—when they managed just one run on four singles and an Angel error.

Houston right-hander Bob Bruce turned back the Mets on just two hits and struck out 11 through eight innings but lost his shut out and complete game bid with two away in the ninth.

Bruce walked leadoff man Duke Snider in the ninth, got the next two Mets, but then hit pinch hitter Choo Choo Coleman and walked Charlie Neal.

After yielding a pinch two-run single to Chris Cannizzaro, Bruce was relieved by Don McMahon, who struck out Cliff Cook.

Roger Craig allowed eight hits and the Mets committed four errors, with misplays by Craig and Tim Lincecum leading to two unearned runs.

Baylor Wins Meet, Porks Show Well

By BILL SIMMONS

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP)—Baylor University trackmen ran like the wind, which was too fast for the field most of the time, and the Bears captured their second straight Southwest Conference track championship Saturday at Fayetteville.

A brisk breeze, ranging at speeds of six to over 12 miles per hour, disallowed three record performances. The maximum wind allowable is 4.473 miles per hour.

Even so, six new records went into the books, although not necessarily by the people who were expected to set them.

Baylor was the only defending champion to repeat its winning performance of 1962. Defending champions in seven events failed to re-capture their 1962 form.

The Bears had 64 1-5 points. Rice had 54 1-5, Texas A&M had 37 2-5, Arkansas 32 1-5, Texas 28, Southern Methodist 26, Texas Tech 14 and Texas Christian 12.

Warren Brattolf of Rice set a new pole vault record, clearing 15 feet, 6 inches on his first try. The record shattered the one set in 1962 by Fred Hansen of Rice, who missed Saturday in three attempts at 15-6. Brattolf missed in three tries at 15 feet, 8 1/4 inches. The old record was 15-5.

Danny Roberts of A&M failed to better his put of the shot in Friday's preliminaries, and the 57 feet, 9 inch shot stood up as the record. Ed Red of Rice set a new javelin mark and Roberts also rewrote the discus standard Friday.

Loy Gunter of Texas, favored in the half mile run, finished second in that event Saturday to Rex Garvin of Baylor. Brian Bolton of SMU, defending champion, did not place.

Other defending champions who did not retain their event championships were Bill Kemp of Baylor in the 100 and 200-yard dashes, Hansen in the pole vault and Gunter in the mile run.

E. L. Ener of A&M in the 440-yard run and Baylor in the mile relay.

Garvin repaired from a broken leg two months ago to scoop Bolton's crown.

A&M won the mile relay in record time—3:10.7, bettering the 3:11.6 set by Texas in 1958.

Bobby May of Rice bested his qualifying time in the 330-yard intermediate hurdles—a new event—Saturday to re-set the record he established in Friday's preliminaries.

Records disallowed because of excessive wind speed included a 20.2 by Billy Foster of SMU in the 220, a 13.9 by Bob Johnson of SMU in the 120-yard high hurdles and a 9.4 in the 100-yard dash by Foster.

Arkansas, making its best showing since 1949 in a conference meet, won the first three places in the broad jump. Dick Perry, Jim Mace and George Russ all cleared 24 feet—the first time a Razorback jumper had done so since 1939.

Hughes Win State B Track Title

SEARCY, Ark. (AP)—Hughes won the Class B track championship by edging Harding Academy 27 1/2 to 27 points in the state meet at Searcy.

Stamps placed third in the meet Saturday with 21 1/2 points, followed by Mineral Springs with 20; Charleston 18; Carlisle 7 and Atkins 6.

David Young of Hughes set a new shot put record, one of four broken in the meet. Hughes tossed the shot 55 feet 2 1/4 inches, breaking the old record of 50 feet 6 inches set in 1960 by Pittman of Hughes.

Elwood Brooks of Mineral Springs topped two records. He ran the 120-yard high hurdles in 14.8 to top a 15 flat record set by Renfrow of Charleston in 1960.

Brooks also shattered the 180-yard low hurdles by a full second with a 20 flat time. The old record was set by Griggs of Clarendon in 1957 with a 21 flat time.

Church Elder of Gentry set a new mile run record with a 4:41.4 time compared to 4:45.6 set by Raley of Stamps in 1962.

John Martin of Charleston took first place in the high jump with a 5-8 leap. Doug White of Stamps jumped 19-11 1/2 to win the broad jump and Young of Hughes won the discus with 136-2 heave.

In the 440-yard relay, a Harding Academy team of Woodward, Ely, Henson and Smith got the top spot with a 4:59 time.

A very successful track season closed at Hope High School Friday with Billy Aldridge and Jacky Russell going to the state meet as did Junior Eddie Aslin.

The Junior mile relay team of Watkins, Ball, Samuels and Aslin also went to the meet.

Although the team wasn't outstanding, individuals did well this season. There were nine records broken and one tied. This is the first time in years that seniors have participated in the track program.

Three year lettermen are Horton and Wray. Two year lettermen, Sullivan, Porterfield, Aldridge, Thrash and Parris. One year lettermen are Guerin, Jordan, Barber, Samuels, Waller, McNatt, Purvis and Hudson.

Junior high lettermen are, two year, Purdue; one year, Aslin, Parris, Watkins, Samuels, Poole, Ball, Davis, Thompson, Ingram, and Duke.

Managers were Jones, Walker and McMurrugh.

Golf lettermen include Waddie, Strong and Pilkinton.

Palmer Underwent Minor Surgery

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—It wasn't revealed until he had left town but Arnold Palmer, the golf great who made a poor showing in the Colonial National Invitation Sunday underwent minor surgery during the tournament.

Palmer, one of the favorites and member of golf's celebrated Big Three, had 299 for 72 holes—the highest score he had shot since 1955 when he had 312 in the Colonial.

The nature of the surgery was not disclosed but it was said to be considered of a type that would handicap a man playing golf.

Boros Ignores Big Three, Wins Tourney

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—Julius Boros ignored the "Big Three" dynasty Sunday and waltzed, by a four-shot margin, to the championship of the $60,000 Colonial national invitation golf tournament.

The big Mid Pines, N.C., veteran shuttled down the home stretch with a 1-over-par 71 to past a 279 total and douse a tournament victory drought that stretched back to 1960. The former national open champion picked up his last title check here three years ago.

Boros earned $12,000 for his victory march, threatened by a gallant challenge from little Gary Player blazing down the home stretch.

The lithe South African, trailing by eight shots after 54 holes, raced through the front nine in 32 strokes, dipped four under par at the 14th and to within two strokes of the leader.

A bogey at the 15th coupled with a Boros birdie at the 14th erased the threat. Both parred on in, which enabled Player to snatch the second prize of $6,000 from favorite Jack Nicklaus, who had a par 70, a 284 total and third-place $3,500.

Arnold Palmer never threatened to successfully defend his title here and wound up 20 strokes off the pace at 299.

They Can Tell a Kennedy

CONWAY, Ark. (AP)—Mrs. R Sargent Shriver was just what the 1,500 people attending the sixty annual meeting of the Arkansas Association for Retarded Children meeting expected: A Kennedy.

Visitors remarked about the similarity between her manner of speech, pronunciation, gestures and quick wit and that of President Kennedy.

When Gov. Orval E. Faubus handed her an Arkansas Traveler certificate and said that made her an ambassador for the state, she quipped:

"I'm delighted I've finally received an assignment none of my brothers ever received."

She also told of meeting a man who described himself only as an "Arkansas farmer" on the flight from Washington to Little Rock.

"He told me I should listen more to Orville," she said, and I asked, "Orville Freeman (Secretary of the Agriculture)"

"He told me no," she said. "He meant Orval Faubus."

Trying to Buy New Hat Is Ordeal

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—One of life's little ordeals for a conservative man today is trying to buy a new hat that won't startle passing dogs or scare children into fits.

To women, shopping for a new bonnet is one of the greatest pleasures; to their husbands it is one of the greatest of nuisances.

The average man has a secret fear that any kind of headgear makes him look ridiculous except a sun-faded old fishing cap. He realizes he is no Anthony Eden or Clark Gable, two of the few well-known men of modern times that could wear a hat with masochism aplomb.

It is said that the reason President Kennedy usually prefers to go hatless is that he suffered a nervous shock in his childhood by seeing a picture of Calvin Coolidge in an Indian headdress.

YOUNG LOVE AND OLD PROBLEM

By HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Dear Helen: Ever since my mother died last year her sister has been keeping house for Dad and me. She means well but she's so strict; not at all like Mom who was understanding and kind—the sort of mother you dream about. Her death was the first big sorrow I've had to face. I'm just 16.

Dad, who is in the Navy, has been transferred to California. I Mrs. Maggie Davidson, Mrs. Tom Haynes and Mary Margaret, Washington; Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Humphries and family, Shreveport, La.; Mr. and Mrs. Lucille Spauld, Little Rock.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Rawson of Webb City, Mo., are visiting Dr. and Mrs. Lynn Harris and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Amos and family, Pueblo, Colo., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Smith and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Powell.

Mrs. C. P. Herrington of Texarkana was here Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Willis Cobb, and Mr. Cobb.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Cornelius have had as recent guests Mrs. Ola Doyle of Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., and Mrs. Jess Funk of Springfield, Mo.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Thrash and children of Richardson, Tex., were the weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Thrash.

Mrs. Cora Hutchens had as Sunday guest, Mr. and Mrs. Burton Hise of Nashville, Tenn.

Mrs. A. C. Ball and family had for an overnight guest Master Britt Henry of Texarkana whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Henry joined them Sunday. Also for Sunday guests were Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Ball and Suzanne of El Dorado.

Dear Helen: I am married and have three lovely children whom my husband and I adore. Unfortunately he works at night and after the children are in bed, I am left with four walls to look at and no one to talk to.

About a year ago this man I know started to stop on his way home from work. We'd talk and watch TV and once he told me he loved me and then I knew I would have to tell my husband. It took a lot of courage. We had no affair or anything like that but my husband doesn't believe me.

Dear Helen: My parents forbade me to continue dating my steady because we were growing too fond of each other. Also, he quit high in his junior year and they didn't like that. Hearing this, his mother told them off. Now my mother wants me to forget I ever knew the boy or his mother. Isn't that asking too much?—Confused

Dear Confused: This sounds like a tempest in a teapot but, in the main, your mother is right. If your boy friend had any character he would at least finish high school and, from what you say, his mother is equally unstable. The best way to forget him is to date other boys. Going steady is detrimental to both the boy and the girl. Only the young and inexperienced would commit themselves to such a senseless custom.

Dear Helen: I long to help others and would like to go back to business but am unable to do the type of work I used to which entailed a certain physical effort. I speak and write Spanish fluently and wonder if that would be an asset in finding a job. The only thing I get so nervous at an interview that I literally can't speak—just shake and shiver and go all to pieces. —Flustered

Dear Flustered: Everyone is a little nervous when applying for a job. However, you have a valuable asset to offer in the fact that you speak Spanish and when you go to see people, keep that in mind. Shopping services in large department stores often seek women who speak a foreign language. Apply at the personnel department of those in your city. Also try the personnel department in any of the large hospitals as they have need of interpreters. Both of these are what are called "service jobs" and would satisfy your need to help others.

He talks about it all the time. This makes me miserable. It makes him miserable too as we truly love each other and our children. —Very Unhappy.

Dear Unhappy: You should have thought of all this possible unhappiness before you started in on that ill-fated adventure. You must remember that it is very difficult for a husband to believe his wife's friendship with another man entirely innocent. And yours really wasn't—sooner or later your friend would have expected a more intimate relationship and you know it.

Just put yourself in your husband's place—how would you react if the circumstances were reversed—would you accept his explanations without question? I think not. So now you will have to accept life on his terms for a while and it is not going to be easy. Be as patient and understanding as you hope he will be.

Dear Helen: My niece and nephew visit us often and stay for supper. As soon as they come in the living room they turn on the television and dial a Western with plenty of killing and shooting. We like to listen to the news and good music but that makes no difference to our young guests, they like Westerns. Their attitude annoys me and I tell them so. Am I right?

Another problem arises with our two little granddaughters who have a poodle they dearly love. They are forever kissing it on the mouth and I don't approve of this as I think it is unhealthy. They say everyone kisses their dogs. What do you think?—Concerned.

Dear Concerned: Your niece and nephew need a lesson in good manners. No one comes into another's home and turns on the television without first asking if they may. You are absolutely right about the part of your complaint. But you must remember that young people have very different tastes from yours and the excitement of a Western has great appeal for them. The children are your guests for the evening so why not let them listen to the programs that they enjoy?

The question of kissing the poodle is not so much unhealthy as it is dangerous. The best-tempered animals are unpredictable and if suddenly frightened or unwittingly hurt, might turn on their owners. Explain this to your little granddaughters and also impress on their parents the seriousness of it.

Have you a problem? Perhaps Helen Worden Erskine can help you. Write her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

PARADOX OF LOVING, ETC.
Dear Helen: In all the 16 years of our married life, my husband and I have never once disagreed. We just plain get along and love one another more every day, yet our three children, age 12, 13 and 15, row from morning till night.

There are times when I actually fear that murder would be committed were I to leave them alone. The oldest, a boy, delights in pitting the two younger against each other, especially at table. My husband and I have tried everything; sending the instigator of the trouble meal-less to his room; threatening; cajoling; taking away TV privileges; cutting off allowances. But to no avail.

I realize that they are passing through that difficult period known as adolescence but it was the same when they were little. We have always given them everything they need, taken them to church regularly and tried to instill the spirit of loyalty and fair play in them. It's been share and share alike. What one does, we all do—even going to the movies.

I've always made it a point to be home when the children come from school; serve four nourishing meals a day (one a bedtime snack); keep their clothes in order and do a thousand and one little things for them. They never raise a hand to help us make a bed, wash the dishes or pick up after they've littered the rooms.

I've tried my best to teach them responsibility but I might as well try to curb the wild wind. We won't let them drive the car but his doesn't seem to trouble them. All they want to do is stay at home and fight among themselves. Where have my husband and I failed?—Mrs. M.

Dear Mrs. M.: Soul-tying though your problem may be, it is neither insoluble nor unusual. A friend of mine with three children faced much the same situation. She and her husband adored each other. After 20 years of married life she is still his sweetheart and he her lover.

Apart, their children were angels, collectively demons. And it has been so ever since the kids were babies. I spent a pretty

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mrs. J. O. Gold of Washington, Ark., and the late Rev. Gold. Mr. Jones is the grandson of Mrs. Dan Godbold of Hope and the late Mr. Godbold.

A wedding is planned for August 18 in the First Baptist Church of Hope.

rough weekend with them several years ago, striving to keep peace in the home while their mother took a much-needed rest. As with your youngsters, the elder boy needed his brother and sister to a point where they were in a mood to commit mayhem.

Eventually, their desperate parents took all three to a psychiatrist. He said the older suffered from a dislocated ego, having been the center of attention until his brother and sister arrived. The answer was separation. Ship the eldest off to school. He graduates this June from college with high honors. The other two, given a chance to study in peace, did equally well in their studies. Having proved themselves individually, all three now meet on equal ground and no longer fight!

Try treating your children as individuals; assign each different tasks and instead of giving them allowances, pay them according to the quantity and quality of their work. The little girl might help you with setting the table, sewing and cooking; one boy could care for the yard, the other wax floors and wash windows. Each should be made responsible for the condition of his or her room. No work. No pay. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for my leaflet, "How To Get Along With an Adolescent."

According to a survey by a psychologist, a man will eat anything in sight if he is hungry enough. But in times of plenty most people base their choice of food on emotional values. Some turn to food products of milk and milk substances in time of stress.

Chocolate candy, hot dogs and nuts seem to satisfy a sorry-for-yourself feeling. Coffee and tea which might have been forbidden in childhood, tend to give a grown up feeling and prove that one is really adult. Caviar and smelly cheese are prestige foods and have a snobbish appeal.

If a woman resents her husband, she sometimes serves him things he definitely does not like, even burns the biscuits and brings forth stale bread! This causes him to criticize and the next thing you know he is paying alimony. It all seems to go in a vicious circle; feed a man well and you will keep him happy; keep a woman happy and she will feed him well.

Since we are not in the grocery business, we have another suggestion that will keep a woman happy... something new to wear... naturally, purchased at Raley's.

This is one time when happiness comes at bargain prices. We are having a special sale on suits, dresses and knitted garments. Styles and colors are limited, but you will be sure to find something smart and wearable at the price you want to pay. Because of the varied range of prices, it is impossible to quote them all, but the reductions are substantial, and it is much more fun to see for yourself.

While you are here, you will want to select some summer cottons. They are simply beautiful! For town and country wear, you cannot beat a shirtdress; the Parkland of Dallas are the prettiest ever and priced from $10.95 to $19.95.

We hope to be seeing you at the sale; remember the place... it is Raley's Style Shoppe, 523 West Third Street.

Atlas autopilot pushed the date to May 7. Another week's delay occurred when trouble developed with gyroscopes in the Atlas guidance system.

Today's postponement disappointed Project Mercury officials, more than 700 newsmen gathered at Cape Canaveral to cover the shot, and millions watching television and listening to radio around the world.

A large recovery fleet of 28 ships, 125 planes and 19,000 people was strung out around the world to recover the astronaut no matter where he landed. It will remain on station until the launching is rescheduled.

Before the crucial radar trouble at Bermuda threw a monkey wrench into today's plans, officials had been confident. They announced that they were changing the latest possible launch time from 10:30 a.m. until noon, giving scientists an extra 90 minutes to get the rocket off the ground.

commission, which called for substantial benefits for the eliminated firemen, but the unions rejected them.

As a result of negotiations within the last month, the three-man panel said the railroads have agreed that the bulk of the work performed by firemen on freight diesels is necessary, but that in most cases it can be combined with work performed by other employees.

"On the other hand," the report added, "The brotherhoods do not contend there are no jobs presently occupied by firemen which cannot be abolished."

"The basic problem, therefore, becomes one of establishing a procedure for ascertaining those situations, if any, which will continue to require the presence of a fireman in order to assure adequate safety, and to prevent placing an undue burden upon the remaining crew members."

The continued use of firemen on passenger trains is not an issue in the dispute.

So far five nuclear shots have been reported by the AEC this year. All have been termed of "low yield"—below that of 20,000 tons of TNT.

Some Facts of Life in Arkansas

By J. C. TILLMAN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Turnabout is fair play, the old saying goes, but some times it comes in strange ways.

Automobiles owned by Mr. and Mrs. J. Sterling Berton and Dr. and Mrs. Dee W. Halbrook were parked at the home of Mrs. Earl Rogers in Conway recently. When Jo Ann Burton started to leave, she backed her car into the one belonging to the Halbrooks.

A few days later Dickie Halbrook, Rogers and Bob Sly were playing golf at the Conway Country club. So was Mrs. Burton.

Dickie sliced his tee shot off the green on the No. 4 hole and it went over some trees and landed with a crash.

When the golfers investigated they found a car with a badly shattered windshield.

It belonged to the Burtons.

N. E. (Shug) Johnson of Batesville read in a national magazine about a year ago that bluebirds were becoming scarce, so he began collecting them.

He collected them in the county of Batesville, Ark. (AP)—Hugh Jones, executive director of the Morrilton Public Housing Authority.

gan building boxes for the birds and distributed them from his store-free.

Johnston has given away 24 houses to date and they are erected in various sections of the county.

"Nearly all of the boxes have had bluebirds in them," he reports. Through last summer a box I gave a man has had a total of 14 bluebirds as tenants."

And in Batesville, the other day, a long-legged bird a little larger than a pigeon flew into a truck parked in the community and became immobilized.

The owners of the store in front of which the truck was parked picked the bird up and found they couldn't identify it.

It had a red spot decorating the front of its head and oversized feet common to birds that inhabit marshlands.

A bid of research brought identification. It was a gallinule, which lives in temperate and tropic wetlands and oceanic islands, and is, like the bluebird, becoming a rarity.

Columbus Oliver, born a slave in Mobile, Ala. Sept. 6, 1859, celebrates his 104th anniversary this year. He said he served in the Spanish-American war and has never had a doctor attend him.

Name Is Florida Gallinule, But It's a Local Fellow

—Hope Star photos

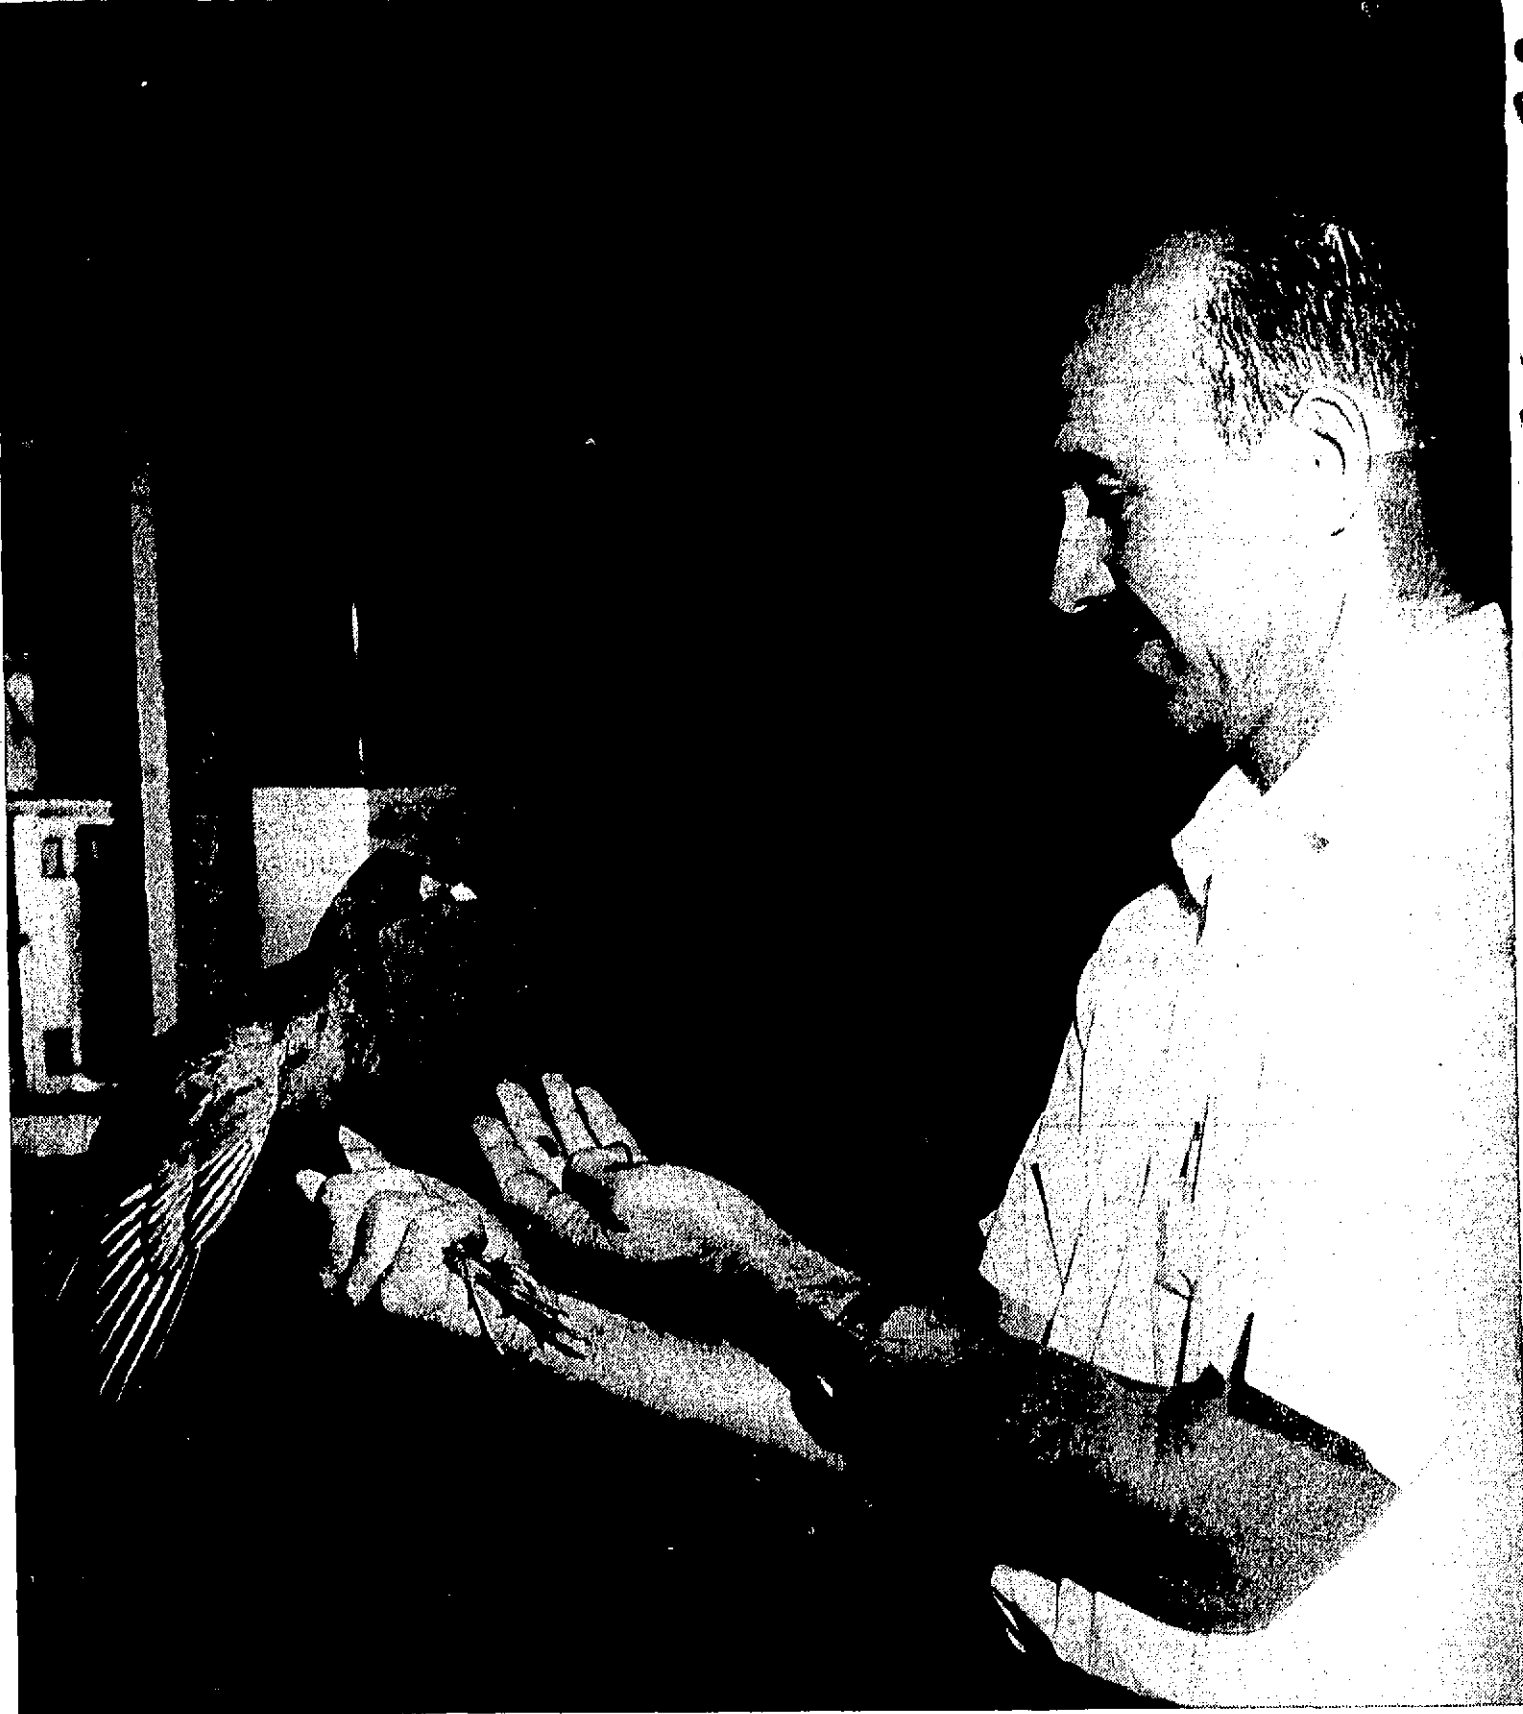

ABOUT A YEAR AGO YOUR EDITOR PICKED UP A fascinating color shot while camera-scouting Grassy Lake. The guide, Robert E. Lee (Eddie) Calhoun of McNab, pointed out a midnight-black hen escorting her four inkball chicks across the lily-pads. Our picture with a telephoto lens was good but not close enough — a common failing with wildlife shots.

LAST WEEK I RE-DISCOVERED THE SAME BIRD IN captivity — at Dr. Herbert Rogers' dog hotel, Highway 29 South. It is a Florida Gallinule, sometimes known as the Purple Galli-nule — and this one, completely tame, was picked up in the middle of the road at Oakhaven by Sue Pendergraft, 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Pendergraft. They turned it over to Dr. Rogers, who put it in a dog cage and immediately discovered what it liked as food — live mice, bugs, canned dog food.

Rogers to show the relative size of the bird.

THE PICTURE SHOWS THE GALLINULE TO BE A CHAR- COAL gray, but this is a photographic requirement; the bird is really ink black, however the feathers would not show in a truly black reproduction. On the crest is a red button, the mark of a carnivorous bird — and your editor saw the prisoner eat a hearty meal of live mice!

"GALLINULE" — THE DICTIONARY SPELLS IT OUT explicitly. The word is from the Latin "gallinula" meaning chicken, diminutive of "hen." It is of the family Rallidae, related to the coot, and sometimes known as water hen, or marsh hen. IT IS UNAFRAID OF MAN ON THE LAKE, AND FRIEND- LY even when caged. Its brief flight around Dr. Rogers' cage room had the whisper-quiet of a ghost.

NOT SO QUIET ARE THOSE MONSTROUS FEET — which, a wag around The Star's composing room said, made it appear that the feet and the Gallinule belonged to different birds!

CHAPTER 1

I first saw the doctor when he was putting the mail box on the post at the street end of his driveway.

Smokey was using red paint for this job and, though preoccupied, he soon became aware that I was watching him.

"You should roughly block out the letters first," I advised, stepping into the gravelled street to go closer to him. "With a pencil or something."

He glanced at me over his shoulder, then smiled. Since it was the first time I had seen Smokey smile, I stopped dead, fascinated. He turned around then, and took a step toward me, looking at me. "Do you have a pencil?" he asked me.

I hunted in the pockets of my seersucker, and came up with a stub of a pencil and a pad of paper. I am the sort of person to write notes to myself, reminders of what I want to do, a list of things needed from the stores downtown.

I went on across the street to him, and gave him the pencil. He took it, his fingertips touching mine, and he turned back to the mail box.

"It's just as well that I don't earn my living at this sort of thing," he said, as if to himself. He bent over the box, half crouched. "It's a long name," he muttered. Then he slanted his eyes up at me. "Do I have to put it all on?"

"We have ours marked just Osborne," I told him.

"Osborne," he repeated. "We?"

"My aunt and I," he nodded. "Good," he said. He leaned back. "Even Howdershell is a long, long name," he mused.

But he stood printing his name, his face intent. Then he put the initials in front of it. SMK. And he shook his head.

He turned to me alertly, his eyes bright, and his mouth laughing. "You wouldn't think loving parents would endow a son with a name like mine, would you?"

"But — I don't know what your name is..."

"No, of course you don't. And you certainly couldn't imagine it. But listen to this and tell me, truly, what you think of parents who would name a helpless male infant Sylvester Sylvester Merkle Howdershell?"

perhaps I shouldn't have.

But he was laughing, too, his straight eyebrows drawn up to the middle of his forehead. "And then," he continued, "what would you say if you knew that I had turned around and saddled my son with the very same monstrosity of a name?"

"But," I said earnestly, "you would want your son to have your name."

He nodded. "That was why I did it. We call him Keyes, and that isn't too bad. Myself — I've just used the initials. And SMK comes out Smokey, or Smokey."

He began to sketch his last name on the box side. "D'you suppose I should put my M.D. on this as well? That would make it long."

"No," I told him.

"Be quite a parade of initials, wouldn't it?" he said. "I could scare up some more for the tail. F.A.C.S. F.R.C.S. What's your name?"

"Osborne," I said. "I'm Jannie. Short for Janice, Aunt Bean shortened it."

He nodded. "I'm glad to have neighbors named Jannie and Aunt Bean."

"It's short for Philomena. Our family was ruthless toward its children, too."

I reached for the pencil, and made some changes in the printing. He watched me.

"I had to learn to do some of this stuff," I told him. "I'm a school teacher, you see. First grade."

Smokey — and his nickname suited him — was a "different" man. And Keyes — I was to learn that his name suited the grave, intent boy he was. He was about 14 then, and a very nice kid. Tall like his father, and still awkward.

Smokey then — Smokey now — was — he is — a tall man, but with his weight so well distributed that he doesn't seem to tower.

And he doesn't stoop. He has broad shoulders — a massive waist, flat hips. He moves with ease and grace — and strength. His arms and hands are particularly strong and clever. As a surgeon's hands should be. His hair is dark, and he wears it short, but not in a stubby crew cut. He has a good hairline, his skin is brown with color bright upon his cheeks. Rather nobly infant Sylvester Sylvester Merkle Howdershell they are, and they make his eyes seem deep-set. There is a crease on his left cheek — not a disfiguring scar, but the injury which caused it must have been severe, for it curves under his eye and up along his temple to his hair.

I noticed that scar when I first saw Smokey, and wondered about it. Then, as I came to know the man, I forgot it. No, not forgot. It came to be a part of the whole man, like the vibration of his voice, or the glint in his brown eyes. Something in his past accounted for that scar.

Smokey's hands, even smudged with red paint — that day I watched them as he painted his name on the mail box. They were very clean hands, with the nails trimmed and clean.

"You couldn't be a surgeon without supple hands," I blurted. He looked up at me. "That's right," he said quietly. "Especially this surgeon."

I sat down on the little bank under the hedge. "Why especially you?" I asked him.

"Doctors learn in three ways," he told me. "Some read it out of books, and remember. Some watch it done, and remember. I can read, I can listen, but until I take a problem into my own hands and solve it, it isn't mine."

He was a busy man; his hours at the hospital were long and I came to know, from a word or two from him, and from many words said by others, that he had tremendous skill as a surgeon. People called him wonderful, and marvelous, and would add, "Aren't we lucky to have him!"

Of course we were lucky, a small town — 35,000 when the college is in session — with our 100-bed hospital — to have such a man! A time or two I said something of this to Smokey. And once he answered me.

That time he sat with his hands spread out before him, and he looked at them. "A man — any surgeon, Jannie — can do just so much. There are just so many hours in each day, just so much strength to a man's back, and his feet, so much ability in his fingers. And who is to say what ease is important? The President of the United States? Suzanne Hin-ton with imbedded tonsils? If I can live here in Elmbank, and work every day, if the people I care for here respond well, and are helped — perhaps I am the lucky one."

So he was gentle and he was humble. To be strong and skilled, and a part of the work he did, and the inner core of him was gentle humility.

I liked him at once. And to be completely frank from that first day I was devoted to him. I had never had a friend like him.

Within months, the town began to say that we were more than friends.

This talk of course filtered back to me, and I hoped solemnly that it might be true, that it would be.

CHAPTER 11

Aunt Bean and I had been upset at word of the new doctor coming to live in the Malawey house.

The Malawey house was a show place for Elmbank. Visitors to town were shown the college, the cemetery, the hospital and the library, and finally they were driven out along our street, under the arching elms and maples, and allowed to feast their eyes upon the pre-Civil War plantation house. Only a fraction of the original grounds now are a part of the property, but the buff brick mansion still stands with dignity, encircled by its white-columned porches that make the great rooms as cool as a cave in the summer, and shelter them from the blasts of winter. There had lately been some talk of making a museum out of the Malawey house, and Aunt Bean was outraged to know that what she called "just people" were going to live in it.

"You'll not like it," she promised me. "You've been going over there for flowers, and you think the woods are your own."

"I know. But maybe they'll still let me walk in the woods."

"That dignified old house, overrun with children."

"Don't you suppose the original Malawey built so large a house because he had children?"

Aunt Bean only sniffed at my suggestion, and both of us settled down to await the arrival of the new doctor and his family.

She was only partly placated when the "children" turned out to be two only. "But they are teenagers!" she informed me. "And what's worse — no mother! The man — the doctor — is trying to raise them himself."

"Poor things."

"He's hired Clara Washington, and he has dogs!"

"Clara will take care of everything, including the dogs." At the time I really wasn't too interested. For Clara would let me walk in the woods. She was an institution in Elmbank. People who were "taken care of" by Clara Washington immediately acquired a certain social standing. Leather colored, leather skilled, the tall angular woman could and did rule any household with a firm hand, and a stern notion of the proprieties.

The woods in question came up to the rear lawn of the Malawey house, and on that afternoon when we painted his mail box I asked Dr. Howdershell — Smokey — if he would let me continue to walk in them. "I'll walk with you!" he promised. "The woods were why I rented the house!"

The dogs were two Airedales, Mac and Rusty, and no more beautiful or sensible than any Airedales. Their coats were rough, and their feet enormous; they picked up every burr and tick in the neighborhood. And would defend the home and family of their master valiantly against his best friends, welcome the booziest bum with glad cries.

The children — they were two, as well. Keyes and Lovey. Fourteen and 12 when Smokey brought them to Elmbank. Now 18 and 16.

There never once was any suggestion of Lovey's leaving home and the public schools of Elmbank. Smokey kept his children close, devoting every spare minute of his time and attention to them. They may have missed having a mother, but their father served double duty in his own capacity. He kept Lovey's interests closely in his mind, amused and anxious, too, about her adolescent affairs. He went through every phase with the girls, as he had not had to do, so extremely, with Keyes.

The boy was a serious lad who planned to become a doctor. Keyes had never given Smokey a minute's worry.

But Lovey went through every phase of adolescent girlhood. There was the year when she was boy crazy.

There was the period of argument, of disagreement.

There was the time of blase boredom, and the cynical period. Last winter, Lovey went through a deeply serious phase, with life to be planned, and talked about endlessly.

But with spring, all this changed. Lovey was young again; she dressed like every young thing on the streets of Elmbank, in the mall shop, on the benches at the track meets. Sloppy raincoat, thick, ribbed sweater, dirty sneakers — and she acquired a steady boy friend.

Not her first "steady," for Lovey, in any mood, is a popular girl. Dark-haired, slender and pretty. But this steady was Benny Bell, and he was not much good. Or he hadn't been, to date. Handsome, of course. His appeal was all physical. Benny was a big boy, and if he could have kept his mouth shut he might have fooled his elders into thinking he was attractive. He was blond — muscular — he had dark-lashed blue eyes — golden skin — and a vacuum-saw hair.

I often saw him sprawled over the magazine rack in the drug-store, absorbed in the girly books. Except for the appeal of a young Greek god, I couldn't give Benny much. But then I was not 16.

Lovey was. But still he didn't seem to be Lovey's type. Or what I was sure Smokey hoped to be her type. I would have talked to the girl about him if she had given me an opening, but in this particular phase, older people were not in communication with Lovey.

Her name, incidentally, is Loretta, which she hates. And only in her more serious moods would she consider using it. There was a time when she and her father — and I — drew up a list of names she did consider acceptable, and we discussed the ways of making them legal for Lovey. Nothing came of it. Keyes had told us that nothing would.

I always think of Smokey — and always shall, probably — as he was on the night when Lovey was stricken with acute appendicitis. That was about a year ago. Smokey came home from the hospital in the dusk of a late afternoon to be told by a worried Clara that Lovey was "off her feed, doctor. She ain't eat no lunch, and she tells me she won't want no suppah."

Indeed, that was being "off her feed!" The girl was as slender as a flower stem, but she ate enormously, and readily, at all hours of the day or night. So Smokey dropped his bag on a chair, and bounded up the stairs to Lovey's bedroom.

"Does it hurt, pudding?" he asked her, taking her hand in his. It was cold, and the pulse was erratic under his thumb.

"It hurts some," she admitted. "I guess I ate something."

"Let me see..." He pushed the blanket away, and his hands felt of her abdomen, first through her corduroy robe, then against the skin.

"Mmmmm. I'm going to make with the hospital bit!"

He went out into the hall and shouted down to Keyes to bring the car around in front. "I've got an appendix to take over to the hospital," he announced. He scooped Lovey up into his arms and carried her down the stairs, telling Clara not to wait supper.

Keyes would be right back — she was to call Jannie and let her know what was happening.

"What is happening, doctor?" asked Clara calmly.

"This girl has appendicitis."

Of course Lovey came through the surgery in fine shape. I stayed at the hospital that night until Smokey was finally persuaded to leave her and go home. He'd seen

Audience Not Quiet During Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—When those vital Nielsen ratings, listing television's top ten programs, come out every two weeks, one is likely to look at the estimates of astronomical numbers of persons in the audience and imagine millions of people glued rapturously to their chairs by the antics of, say, "The Beverly Hillbillies."

The other night, I paid some attention to the four people in my living room, all watching—if that's the word—a popular variety show. The star came on and sang an opening song, but about half way through one member of the audience said, loudly: "I understand he's very happily married."

This failed to elicit much of a conversation. As the next number—a stand-up comedy routine—started, another viewer gave a sharp exclamation, jumped up and disappeared into another room. She returned in the middle of a joke with a stamped, addressed envelope and a long explanation about how important it was to get it mailed. We all missed the tagline. We just about finished the talk about the letter when it was time for the commercial.

At this point the fourth member of the viewing team, departed for the kitchen to make a glass of iced coffee which resulted in a three-party search for a missing saccharine bottle.

So it went for a solid hour. All told, I don't believe there were 10 consecutive minutes of quiet, uninterrupted viewing during the 60 minutes.

Bing Crosby's No. 1 boy, Gary, ne — standing in the corner as they wheeled the cart down the corridor, as it came out of surgery — he knew I was there. When he decided to go home, he came and lifted me up out of the chair in the sunroom. "Three A.M., Miss Osborne," he said, "his voice shaking a little. "And that's no time for a school marm to be indecently out of bed."

But when he put me into my car and told me to wait so that he could follow me home, he leaned over, and he kissed my cheek. Lightly, just as he would have kissed Lovey. I was glad that I had staved at the hospital near him all that night.

Handless Pilot Visits Mother

NEW YORK (AP)—A handless Kansan paid a Mother's Day visit to his mother in New York Hospital—after piloting his own plane to get here.

Raymond Hollander, 41, of Wichita, Kan., who lost his hands when an old mortar shell exploded in his scrap yard 15 years ago said he flew through stormy weather, got lost and made two emergency landings when his gas got low.

But, he added, "If I had to walk here from Kansas, I would have. This will probably be my last trip here to see her."

Hollander said his mother, Lina, Deutsch, 71, is a cancer patient and under heavy sedation most of the time, but was awake and able to talk to him.

"It was a very happy Mother's Day for me," he said.
